BLET: ‘It’s good for us, but don’t you try it!’

Bizarre as it may sound, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Trainmen (BLET) has filed a lawsuit against the UTU complaining of an action the BLET initiated. Equally wacky is that hours after the BLET filed its lawsuit, it was successful in an arbitration defending its own identical behavior.

Here are the facts:

Some years ago, the BLET imposed so-called “seniority maintenance” fees on all Illinois Central and Kansas City Southern (including KCS subsidiary South Rail) employees holding engineer seniority dates. Unless those employees, who belonged to the BLET, paid the seniority maintenance fees to the BLET, they could not accumulate additional engineer seniority while working as engineers. More recently, the BLET imposed seniority maintenance fees for all engineers employed by Conrail in the Shared Assets Area.

The fees are intended to reimburse the BLET for the fair share of the expenses of negotiating and administering the engineers’ collective bargaining agreement.

The fees also serve as a deterrent to engineers joining the UTU, and to encourage trainmen, who hold both engineer and trainmen seniority, to join the BLET. But when that didn’t have its desired effect, and engineers continued to choose the UTU over the other organization, the BLET began offering cut-rate dues to train service employees in a blatant attempt to raid the UTU.

As a defensive measure, and only years after the BLET imposed seniority maintenance fees, the UTU sought – and obtained from most major railroads – similar authority to impose seniority maintenance fees on trainmen.

The UTU made absolutely clear when it obtained this authority that it would halt implementation of seniority maintenance fees if the BLET stopped its raiding of the UTU – that is, the offering of cut-rate dues to trainmen – and scrapped its own imposition of seniority maintenance fees.

The BLET files lawsuit against UTU for fees it also charges members

Feds say rail cops harass workers

WASHINGTON, D.C. – For many years, the United Transportation Union has complained to carriers about improper conduct of railroad police, who have abused and harassed UTU members – as well as rail employees represented by other organizations – through oppressive interview tactics, illegal wiretapping, spying and other inappropriate activities.

No more are the UTU complaints mere allegations. The Department of Transportation’s inspector general has validated the UTU’s complaints, calling many railroad police actions against UTU members “serious issues,” “misconduct” and “heavy-handed.”

In a report to the bipartisan leadership of the Senate Commerce Committee, which has oversight of railroads, DOT Inspector General Kenneth Mead (the IG) said his office investigated

Lifetime max boosted

The lifetime maximum benefit for each individual covered under the Railroad Employees’ National Early Retirement Major Medical Benefit Plan (UnitedHealthcare’s Policy GA-460003) will increase from $38,100 to $92,400 as of Jan. 1, 2005. The $4,300 in additional benefits payable applies to expenses incurred on or after Jan. 1, 2005. The lifetime maximum benefit is adjusted each year based on the medical cost component of the Consumer Price Index.
City halts SEPTA’s plans for fare hike

PHILADELPHIA — In a rare use of its veto power, the City of Philadelphia in December halted the brakes on a last-minute plan by the SEPTA board to erase the agency’s $62-million deficit by raising the cash fare from $2 to $3—an highest in the nation—and eliminating 20 percent of weekday service on buses, trolleys and trains, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

“Most of the workers in this region cannot afford a 28 percent fare increase,” said Christian DiCicco, City Council’s representative on the 15-member SEPTA board. DiCicco joined Jette Newkirk, Mayor Street’s appointee, in temporarily derailing the plan. Under Pennsylvania law, the two representatives of the city—home to 80 percent of SEPTA’s estimated one million daily riders—can veto any measure.

SEPTA riders’ sense of relief could be short-lived. Most board members vowed to override the veto at their Dec. 16 meeting unless Gov. Rendell produces enough money to close the chasm in the agency’s $920-million budget.

Since September, SEPTA had threatened to raise fares by 25 percent, end weekend service and chip agency’s $920-million budget.

Since September, SEPTA had threatened to raise fares by 25 percent, end weekend service and lay off 1,300 employees. SEPTA officials predict that 20 percent of commuters would abandon public transit.

Local 1741 drivers prepare to honor pickets

SAN FRANCISCO — Members of Local 1741 in San Francisco, employees of Laidlaw, are preparing to honor the picket lines of mechanics on the property who are preparing to strike over health insurance. They’ve asked Laidlaw for a wage increase and health benefits. Currently, the mechanics make $28 to $32 an hour and are expected to contribute $28 to $32 an hour and are expected to contribute all of the health insurance costs.

Both sides are hoping to reach a final agreement by Dec. 17, the last school day before the district’s two-week winter break.

Feds say target drivers with medical conditions

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Federal safety officials said last month that states must do a better job identifying and removing from roadways drivers with medical conditions such as epilepsy and dementia that make them dangerous to other motorists.

The National Transportation Safety Board recommended that states adopt laws to guarantee legal immunity for doctors, family members and others who report dangerous drivers to state motor vehicle officials. Twenty states and the District of Columbia have no such laws.

Six states — New Jersey, Nevada, California, Delaware, Oregon and Pennsylvania — require doctors to report drivers with high-risk conditions. Board members said police need to be trained to spot drivers with medical problems and doctors should be taught to talk to patients about whether they should be driving. The board also said federal agencies need to coordinate transportation possibilities for people who can no longer drive.

The government has no data on crashes caused by medical conditions, so the extent of the problem is unknown. The NTSB studied six crashes, including three caused by epileptics having seizures and one by a diabetic who had a heart attack before issuing its recommendations. The crashes, in Maryland, Pennsylvania and Florida, killed eight people and injured 24.

Authorities said as many as one in four drivers could have a condition that may cause a crash if they include arthritis, sleep disorders, high blood pressure, Alzheimer’s disease, alcoholism and catatrics.

Officials crack down on diesel bus fumes

BOSTON — State environmental officials are taking aim at pollution caused by school buses by invoking a seldom-enforced law that limits most vehicle idling to no more than five minutes, according to the Daily News Tribune.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) conducted a sweep of 34 schools in September and October and found that students in many communities, including Waltham and Shrewsbury, were being exposed to more diesel exhaust than permitted under state law. More inspections are ongoing and a third round will be conducted in the spring.

“It’s serious, especially when you have buses idling and spewing the emissions they do around children,” said Ed Coletta, DEP spokesman. “Children breathe deeper. They breathe 50 percent deeper than adults because they have smaller lung capacity.”

Officials at the DEP warn that diesel exhaust can cause breathing difficulties, respiratory infections and attacks of asthma and chronic bronchitis. Diesel exhaust from idling buses can accumulate in schoolyards and inside schools when bus stops are near air intake vents.

The law allows for fines of up to $100 for a first offense and up to $500 for repeat offenses, but has rarely been enforced.

DEP is urging school districts to direct drivers to turn buses off as they arrive to school driveways or parking lots, post “idling limit” signs and retrofit buses with pollution controls or buy new buses with cleaner-burning engines.

A trail of tears

By Paul C. Thompson

Twelve train and engine service employees have been killed in switching and road accidents through early December. The trail of tears leads directly to railroad CEOs.

Concerned more about profits than safety, carriers waited too long to hire urgently needed new crews. They acknowledged going to work tired is like going to work drunk — then they looked the other way, saying freight must move at any cost. When exhausted employees decline more work, they face discipline.

Even in yards with assigned shifts, fatigue is a factor because carriers mandate extra shifts, cancel rest days and assign switchmen to road jobs and roadmen to switch jobs on rest days.

When shipper outrage over poor service forced carriers to begin hiring, they engaged outside contractors to design and implement a flawed one-size-fits-all training program. Then they accelerated training programs.

To his credit, a Union Pacific superintendent in Chicago worked with the UTU to devise an in-house training program designed, implemented and taught by “super conductors” with recognized leadership and safety skills. The program trains new hires on the actual real estate they will work, involves continued monitoring and remedial training. It is praised at the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA). Yet it hasn’t been expanded else where on the UP or adopted by other railroads.

Those killed weren’t just new hires. The FRA identified 21 road collisions involving crews with at least 20 years’ experience. The UTU long has advocated recurrent classroom training with a competent rules instructor — especially in the wake of new technology being introduced. Carriers responded with silence.

As the death toll increases, carriers have focused not on cooperation with the UTU to cure the dangers of fatigue, insufficient training of new hires and shortcomings in recurrent training. Instead, carriers have attacked the Federal Employers’ Liability Act (FELA), which permits injured workers (or families of the deceased) to recover damages from carriers who place profits ahead of safety.

Recently, The New York Times, reading in every congressional office, exposed how dangerous is the railroad workplace. Railroads responded by continuing their attack on FELA, the only safety net employees have against carrier greed.

UTU’s friends in Congress assure the carriers will not carry the policy of scrapping FELA. And at UTU’s request, congressional leaders are considering hearings on rail safety where CEOs will be called to answer questions under a public spotlight. It makes more sense for the carriers to cooperate with the UTU to improve workplace safety.

One way or the other, 2005 is likely to produce workplace safety gains. They have been too long in arriving.

Better transport safety means better training

We can think of no better New Year’s resolution for employers than to do something positive about workplace safety. Hanging posters proclaiming, “safety first,” but not investing in more and improved training programs, is shameful.

Saving money by not hiring, while working existing employees to exhaustion — where they are accidents waiting to happen — is senseless. Refusing to invest in improved safety is scandalous.

More than three years after 9/11, baggage loaded aboard buses and trains is not being inspected for explosives. Employees have not been trained to recognize and respond to security threats.

Cargo containers are being unloaded directly from ships to rail cars without adequate inspection.

In spite of warnings that terrorists could target buses and trains, communication between operating employees and police has not been upgraded.

Outrageous as all this is, carriers have taken even more contemptible action by opposing whistleblower protection, and by lobbying Congress to scrap a law — the Federal Employers’ Liability Act, or FELA — that allows injured rail workers to recover damages when the workplace is unsafe.

What a wonderful year 2005 would be if carriers would voluntarily do the right thing and cooperatively sit down with UTU officers to implement the training and other programs needed to make safety more than an empty slogan.

WASHINGTON WATCH

Thanks to you, we have friends in Congress

The national elections are over and we must return to doing business with Congress, the White House and the various regulatory agencies. Although some UTU-endorsed candidates, including John Kerry and John Edwards, were defeated, most UTU-endorsed candidates were elected.

Sen. Reid will lead the Senate minority this session of Congress as Senate minority leader, succeeding Sen. Tom Daschle (D-S.D.). Sen. Reid has been supported by the UTU since he first became active in politics. Six years ago, he used the UTU bus as a command center in a close election. In November, he received almost 60 percent of the vote in an overwhelming re-election victory.

During the fight for the passage of Railroad Retirement reform, Sen. Reid went to the Democratic Caucus and insisted that the Railroad Retirement Act and Survivors’ Improvement Act of 2001 be put on the calendar; then he worked tirelessly for its successful passage.

Sen. Durbin was elected by Senate Democrats as Senate minority whip for the upcoming congressional session. He lives in Chicago where one of his neighbors and friends is Illinois State Director Joe Staabo.

The upcoming congressional legislative agenda will be hectic and the UTU will be mostly in a defensive position. We will work to defend the laws already on the books that are likely to come under attack by the carriers and their friends in Congress.

We will be working to defend the Federal Employers’ Liability Act (FELA) and to increase bus and rail security and training.

Another urgent task we face is to ensure Amtrak is not privatized and that a national intercity rail passenger network remains in place. We must also fight for adequate funding for transit operations, such as SEPTA.

The bottom line is this: From the standpoint of the UTU legislative agenda, the results were not all bad. We have our work cut out for us. We are confident in our ability to succeed. We believe we are well positioned to achieve legislative victories.

Officers from UTU Locals 265 and 78 (or other Union Pacific (UP) management last month to work out the implementation of remote control operations in the Pocatello yard, according to State Director George Millward. A target date of Jan. 3, 2005, was set to begin training employees who will operate the remote control locomotives. Training will be given to employees who have worked in the Pocatello yard for more than 30 years as well as to those with only a few months of service. Millward said the initial training will last approximately four months.

Ten current assignments will be replaced by remote control operations, Millward said. About 15 yard engineers will not lose their jobs; they will be absorbed into the current local and road operations, he said.

Sam Teullie Sr. (Local 202, Denver), who serves as vice general chairperson, insisted that UP management work closely with local UTU officers in the implementation and training of the remote control operators as well as training of local and road crews as to the new work rules that will be in effect in the Pocatello yard. UP agreed with Teullie and approved an overview committee of the Pocatello yard, according to General Manager Steve Millward to assist UP trainers and Senior Manager of Terminal Operations Steve Wilson in all areas of this new technology and the changeover to remote control operations. Millward said his main concern in the implementation of remote control is “safety to crew members as well as to the community. I have to worry that maintenance personnel replace a little box with toggle switches but we can’t stop proven technology. This technology has been in our industry for more than 20 years and I have expected it to come long before now.”

“We tried to get the other union that represents many of the engineers here in Pocatello to negotiate with us on remote control operations, but they insisted on having all of the work, not half of the work,” Millward said. “Had we not continued negotiations, UP would have been found guilty of all of the work, not half of the work,” Millward said. “Had we not continued negotiations, UP would have been found guilty of all of the work, not half of the work.”

Colorado

“On Nov. 2, 2004, Colorado made history at the ballot box,” said State Director Rick Johnson.

“No, there wasn’t a change from being a ‘red’ state in the presidential election, but there was a change to blue in many other political races within the state.”

Johnson noted Colorado elected two Hispanics to higher office: Democratic Senate candidate Ken Salazar and Democratic Third Congressional District candidate John Salazar.

“Yes, Ken and John are brothers from southern Colorado,” Johnson said. “With their rural roots and moderate political views, the Salazar brothers beat formidable Republican opponents to win their seats.”

Johnson also said Colorado made history when both the state Senate and House changed majorities from Republican to Democratic. “It has been 44 years since both chambers were predominately Democratic,” Johnson said.

“Thanks to the political funding of UTU PAC, feet on the ground and an aggressive get-out-the-vote effort, this election really did change the color of the state to a ‘light blue.’”

New England States

New England States Legislative Board Director George Casey reports that Boston area Amtrak Locals 262 and 1462 sponsored a blood drive for Conductor Larry Solomon in South Station, Boston, earlier this month. Local 1462 Secretary Roberta Pianna is chairperson of the blood drive and can be contacted at (617) 345-7839 for further information.

Minnesota

The UTU Minnesota State Legislative Board held a conference recently where union officers and others reviewed current initiatives and talked about federal and state elections. On hand as a show of support was Minnesota State Sen. David Tomassoni and State Rep. Tony Sethvik. Shown at the conference, standing left to right, are Local 1292 (Proctor) member Paul Fish, Duluth, Massabe Iron Range General Chairperson Clyde Larson; Local 1067 (Virginia) Legislative Rep. Jim Roberg; newly elected State Director Phil Tudor and Tomassoni. Seated is Local 1175 Duluth Legislative Rep. Richard Olson.

Texas

Following a rash of deadly derailments in and around San Antonio, State Director Connie English has been working with the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA), local government officials and the carriers to help straighten out the mess.

“The Union Pacific (UP) and the FRA have started an ‘FTX’ field training exercise program that will last for one year there,” English said. “UP set up a command center at the Kirby Yard where crews have to call in, get job briefings and all of the current bulletins. FRA also is out on the property testing rules knowledge not only of the employees but the managers, too.”

English said the UP replaced the superintendent in San Antonio in an attempt to boost employee morale. “Morale starts with the superintendent,” he said.

Our work cut out for us in 2005

We must wage the battle for security.

With four more years of a president who favors big business, we must work even harder to educate lawmakers in Congress that transportation security means more than airlines. Bus passengers and baggage must be screened. Increased bus operator training and security is a must.

You can help by contacting your lawmakers and explaining the importance of increased bus security. Our national legislative office will also be doing so when Congress returns to Washington, D.C., in January.

We have secured wage and benefits increases and improved working conditions for Locals 113 and 1731.

On Nov. 1, Locals 1697 and 113 (Alex operators) were consolidated into Local 1731 in Spokane, Wash. We are conducting elections for our new local.

We have secured higher wages, benefits increases and improved working conditions for Locals 113 and 1731.

We will work closely with the carriers to improve safety for those at work. The unions have won an agreement for Local 1670 (Laredo, Texas), and for many of our Canadian brothers and sisters.

Contract negotiations begin soon for Local 1596 in Spartanburg, S.C., and for Local 1667 in San Antonio, Texas. We are working with the carriers to put whomever they want on positions, regardless of seniority. The carriers have been after this since the 1988 round. The carriers do not want to accept the fact that yardmasters are not usually entry-level positions, but rather a stepping stone.

Instead of seeking to eliminate the seniority protection in our agreements, the carriers would be better served by looking at work loads and stress levels in our positions. In many instances, people have decided that stress and/or the quality of life is not worth working a yardmaster position.

I can assure you that in this round of bargaining, as in the past, seniority, work preservation and quality of life are at the top of the list as we begin negotiations with the carriers.

As we prepare for this difficult round of negotiations, Doyle Turner, Cara McGratty and I extend to you and your families our best wishes for a safe and prosperous holiday season and new year.

Your seniority is sacred

We are in the process of exchanging Section 6 notices with the carriers as we begin a new round of negotiations toward improving wages and benefits, working conditions and our quality of life. Existing contracts are open for revision effective Jan. 1.

It is likely negotiations will be long and quite difficult. This round of collective bargaining is quite likely to be one of labor’s hardest-fought battles. The carriers have always looked to eliminate and/or consolidate positions. Once again, the carriers are looking for the ability to “assign employees to positions based upon qualification and ability.”

This would eliminate the seniority provisions in agreements and allow carriers to put whoever they want on positions, regardless of seniority. The carriers have been after this since the 1988 round. The carriers do not want to accept the fact that yardmasters are not usually entry-level positions, but rather a stepping stone.

Member's first book takes on mysteries

Members who purchase a copy of E.H. (Frank) Wallace's first book will be involved in tackling two mysteries for the price of one.

In the retired Long Island Rail Road (LIRR) conductor's book, Tickets, Please..., a commuter train conductor's life is turned upside down when he is suspected of robbing and shooting dead a jewelry salesman on his train. But readers engrossed in the mystery woven by Brother Wallace should be gratified to know that 40 percent of the proceeds from the novel will help medical researchers unravel the mysteries they face battling melanoma cancer.

“I had finished the book, but put it on the shelf when I learned my 27-year-old daughter, Kelly Ann, had cancer,” said Brother Wallace, a member of Local 645 in Babylon, N.Y. “I promised her before she died that proceeds from this book would go to the cancer research and treatment program at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in Manhattan.”

Wallace, who spent 28 years on the rails before retiring in September 1999, based one of the characters in his book on a friend, a retired LIRR detective. “I included a lot of rail jargon and explain the mechanics of railroading to the reader,” he said. “This is the first of a series of five books I’ve planned that will involve some of the same characters.”

Though he began his rail career on the LIRR in 1971, Wallace always wanted to write. “I attended writing courses over the years, thanks to Veterans Administration benefits. But I didn’t really get busy with it until I retired.”

The book is available at Barnes & Noble bookstores, through Amazon.com, and will be in a variety of other bookstores soon. Excerpts can be read online at www.Albrix.com. “Click on the ‘Bookstore’ link on the left, then click on the ‘search’ link, and fill in ‘wallace’ as the search term,” said the conductor. “And then buy the book.”

Q's & A's address changes affecting Medicare in 2005

By V.M. “Butch” Speakman Jr.

The Medicare program provides hospital and medical insurance protection for railroad retiree annuitants and their families, just as it does for Social Security beneficiaries. The following questions and answers provide basic information on some of the changes in Medicare that will take effect in 2005.

What are the Medicare Part A deductible and coinsurance charges in 2004 and what will they be in 2005?

For the first 60 days in a benefit period, a Medicare patient is responsible for paying a deductible, which for 2004 is the first $767 of all covered inpatient hospital services. The Part A deductible will increase to $912 in 2005. The daily coinsurance charge that a Medicare beneficiary is responsible for paying for hospital care for the 61st through the 90th day is $219 in 2004, increasing to $228 per day in 2005. If a beneficiary uses “lifetime reserve” days, he or she is responsible for paying $458 a day for each reserve day used in 2004, and $456 a day in 2005. Lifetime reserve days are an extra 60 hospital days a beneficiary can use if illness keeps him or her in the hospital for more than 90 days; a beneficiary has only 60 reserve days during his or her lifetime and the beneficiary decides when to use them.

In addition, the daily coinsurance charge a beneficiary is responsible for paying for care in a skilled nursing facility for the 21st through the 100th day is $109.50 in 2004 and will be $114 in 2005.

Will the Medicare Part B deductible and premium next year and by how much?

The annual deductible for Medicare Part B will increase from $100 in 2004 to $110 in 2005. After that, the deductible will be indexed and subject to annual increases. After the deductible is paid, Medicare Part B will generally pay 80 percent of the approved charges for covered services during the rest of the year; the beneficiary is responsible for paying the remaining 20 percent of the charges.

All beneficiaries currently pay the same basic premium amount for Medicare Part B ($66.60 in 2004 and increasing to $78.20 in 2005), which covers outpatient care and doctor visits. Beginning in 2007, the premium will increase for individuals with annual incomes of more than $80,000, and for couples with annual incomes of more than $160,000, on a sliding income scale.

What new preventive benefits are being offered?

Beginning in 2005, preventive benefits coverage will be expanded to include: a one-time initial wellness physical examination; screening blood tests for early detection of cardiovascular diseases, and diabetes; screening tests for people at risk of diabetes.

Will Medicare be putting out information about program changes?

The Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS), the federal agency responsible for administering Medicare, plans to mail information booklets in 2005 to Medicare beneficiaries to explain the prescription drug benefits that will begin in 2006.

In the meantime, CMS will provide information about Medicare-approved drug discount cards through Medicare’s toll-free number 1-800-MEDICARE (1-800-633-4227), and through the program’s website at www.medicare.gov.

V. M. “Butch” Speakman Jr. serves as labor member of the U.S. Railroad Retirement Board.

Retiree marks 100th birthday

Best wishes for continued life in good health—recently out west on a two-week vacation to Santa Fe, New Mexico, a switchman who retired from the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad in December 1967, became a centenarian on Nov. 2, 2004, the RRB said.

Following are the names of recently deceased retirees who maintained annual membership in the UTU for Life program (formerly known as the UTU Retiree Program), according to reports received at UTU International Headquarters. These brothers and sisters will be missed by their many friends and by fellow UTU for Life members.

The UTU is pleased to announce a number of new benefits for retired members who voluntarily belong to the union’s UTU for Life program.

The new benefits, announced below, are by far the most significant improvements in the program since the program was created in 1976.

And, the additional benefits are being provided at no additional cost to members of the program.

The benefits, which take effect Feb. 1, 2005, include additional discounts on cellular telephones, hotels and motels, cruises and tours, insurance and other items.

Retirement should not mean abandoning workplace friends, losing touch with your industry’s current events and not having influence over public-policy issues affecting retirement.

To keep UTU members together and informed, and to provide them with benefits to help them and their families in their golden years, the UTU for Life program was created. UTU for Life is an expansion of the UTU Retiree Club and its greatest strength will be at the local level.

The UTU for Life program is bringing UTU retirees and active members together for luncheons and other activities aimed at fellowship, information and political action. Dues are still only $9 per year.

“Our retired members from the air, rail, bus and transit industries deserve an opportunity to stay in touch, swap stories, receive information on health care, retirement benefits and legal issues and be part of UTU’s legislative program,” said UTU International President Paul C. Thompson. “Wherever UTU retirees live, there is opportunity for a UTU for Life chapter and UTU will assist in its organization.”

The first UTU for Life chapter was formed in the Seattle/Tacoma area. Retiree Jim Shelley of Seattle coordinated the chapter’s formation. The members of each chapter determine the frequency and location of their meeting and other get-togethers. Spouses are always invited to participate.

“UTU retirees are among our most effective members in influencing lawmakers on issues of Railroad Retirement, Medicare and Amtrak,” Thompson said.

“We also work to offer our retirees a wide-ranging package of benefits that they and their families can use to save money, enjoy their retirement years, enhance their quality of life and celebrate their union affiliation. We think the UTU for Life program offers all that, and very affordably. No other transportation union offers its retirees what the UTU offers, and we are proud of that.”

UTU retirees interested in joining the UTU for Life program (and possibly sponsoring chapters in their areas) should contact: UTU for Life, United Transportation Union, 14600 Detroit Ave., Cleveland, Ohio, 44107-4250, or complete the membership application form below.

Members receive discounts on cellular telephones, hotels and motels, cruises and tours, insurance and much more, at no additional cost!

Members face challenge of New Year’s resolutions

Many UTU members will join the estimated 100 million Americans who decide to improve themselves by making New Year’s resolutions.

A study cited by the Wichita Business Journal, however, found that among those who break their resolutions, nearly a third, or 30 percent, do so during the first week of the New Year. Women were 50 percent more likely than men to give up on their resolutions during the first week, but more women than men made fitness resolutions. And 71 percent of people age 65 and older kept their resolutions, compared to only 35 percent of the younger set.

University of Washington researchers Eliza Miller and Alan Marlatt in 1997 found those successful in keeping resolutions have a strong initial commitment to making a change, have coping strategies to deal with problems that come up, and keep track of their progress. Marlatt, who has studied the subject for more than 20 years, said sure-fire ways of setting yourself up for failure include not thinking about resolutions until the last minute and framing resolutions as absolutes by saying, “I will never do such-and-such again.”

With that in mind, below are some of the resolutions that UTU members are making for the year ahead.

I’m a BNSF conductor on the northwestern division and local chairperson. I used to make resolutions about quitting smoking, but I never carried through, so I quit making resolutions. But I did quit smoking. Made up my mind one day and did it cold-turkey. I’d like to see my employer resolve to make more progress on the Shared Values and Safety Initiative.

L-1574, Portland, Ore.

I’m a switchman on the Portland Terminal Railroad and a local chairperson. My resolution is to work safely and come home every day. My second resolution is to go to Mardi Gras in Lafayette, La., for loud music, fast dancing and hard drinking. I love my job. If my employers were to make a resolution, it would be to continue providing a safe workplace, as they have been doing.

L-597, Des Plaines, Ill.

I’m a Union Pacific (UP) engineer on the old C&NW and a local chairperson. I guess I’ll try to quit smoking again. Every year I try, and the longest I’ve gone is three months. But in July 2005, all UP properties will be smoke-free, so I’ll try again. Even though I’m surrounded by diesel fumes. I’d like to see UP resolve to give the new hires more thorough training.

L-991, Steubenville, Ohio

I’m a Norfolk Southern conductor and local president, and I’ve been railroadling for 33 years. I’m quitting smoking this year. It’s killing me! I’ve quit before and started right back after six months. My employer should resolve to get off our backs. How can they tell someone with 30-40 years of experience he doesn’t know what he’s doing and can’t have the weekend off? I’m quite sure that I’ll quit. I guess my resolution, as a union officer, is to keep finding ways to inspire others to come to meetings and participate more.

L-1846, West Colton, Calif.

I’m a conductor on the Union Pacific (former Southern Pacific) and local president. As a union officer, my resolution is to get the new hires more involved. We’re having a Christmas party and a spring picnic so they can come and meet the others in the local and take an active interest in their union. My employer? They should resolve to be more lenient with our new guys.

L-977, Northlake, Ill.

I’m a Union Pacific switchman on the former C&NW with 30 years of experience, and I’m the local trustee. I’ve never really done a New Year’s resolution, and can’t think of any kind of resolution I ever stuck to. I’m a smoker, but I can’t say for sure that I’ll quit. I guess my resolution, as a union officer, is to keep finding ways to inspire others to come to meetings and participate more.

Illinois SLD Joe Szabo travels to Hungary to teach

It wasn’t the fiery goulash, the famous vineyard or even Budapest’s first-rate culture that enticed UTU’s Illinois State Legislative Director Joseph Szabo to travel to Hungary this past fall.

Instead, it was the opportunity to make a difference in a young person’s life that drew him to this Eastern European nation. Szabo found the Hungarian kids to be “bright, charming, tornado-twister of a town called Hodmezovasathy (pronounced hode-meh-zuh-vahshay)er) on the plains of southern Hungary. It is a farming town with a population of 50,000.

For three weeks, Szabo joined a Global Volunteers program that placed him and his fellow volunteers in the classrooms of, let’s just call it Hode, where he taught conversational English to middle- and high-school students.

Global Volunteers is a St. Paul, Minn., based nonprofit organization that offers short-term service programs around the world.

Szabo had a personal reason for traveling to Hungary. This was an opportunity to reconnect with his ethnic roots as his paternal grandparents emigrated from Hungary in the 1920s.

“For me, this was about understanding family roots and giving back to those roots,” said Szabo. “It was a way to understand their history and try to capture what their world was like.”

Working with local teachers, the volunteers helped students with their English-speaking skills, a much-needed task as contact with native English speakers is rare in greater Hungary.

By immersing himself in the daily rhythm of the Hode community, Szabo said he gained a unique, non-tourist perspective on the culture of this Eastern European nation.

Szabo found the Hungarian kids to be “bright and fun-loving” and his favorite memory is of taking 45 Hungarian eighth-graders out to play baseball for the first time ever. “We found a bat somewhere and an inflatable ball and used hula hoops for the bases. It was crazy, but fun!” he related. He sought, but probably without success, to turn the town into diehard Chicago Cubs fans.

Because of the non-political nature of the volunteer program, Szabo declined to comment on whether it was he who taught the students to say, “Union, yes.”

“The whole program was emotionally intense and overwhelming, but in a good way,” Szabo said. “I’d say it was the experience of a lifetime.”

Szabo said he and fellow volunteers were lodged in a tourist-class hotel and ate their meals at the hotel and in local restaurants. Their free time was spent exploring the historic central square and pottery studios of Hode, the nearby university town of Szeged and bustling Budapest.

Parents, grandparents...

This holiday, give a gift that will last a lifetime!

Have you ever stopped to think about what you could have done with the money you spent on holiday gifts in the past? If you’re like most parents and grandparents, you go overboard. But what usually happens to those gifts? Do they end up in the corner, rarely played with – or worse yet, broken? Why not give your little ones a lasting gift this holiday season?

Permanent life insurance is a wonderful way to provide a lifetime benefit for your youngsters. What better way to show them you care? Permanent life insurance is very inexpensive at young ages, and premium-paying choices are endless, since premiums can be paid in one easy payment or over just about any period of time you select. Give a gift that keeps on giving by returning the coupon on the right, or by calling toll-free, (800) 558-8842, for assistance from your UTUIA representative.

in federal court in Philadelphia seeking to overturn UTU’s agreement with carriers permitting the UTU to impose seniority maintenance fees. And just hours after the BLET filed its lawsuit, the First Division of the National Railroad Adjustment Board sided with the BLET, finding the imposition of seniority maintenance fees on engineers was proper. That case arose from two South Rail engineers who refused to pay the maintenance fee to the BLET. As a result, the BLET froze their engineer seniority.

The First Division award turned on a 1998 federal appeals court case known as Corzine, et al. v. Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Illinois Central Railroad Company 147 F.3d 651 (7th Cir. 1998).

The court in the Corzine case upheld the imposition of seniority maintenance fees. The court ruled, “It is difficult to understand why, if the BLET has a statutory duty, as it does, to represent (engineers), it cannot charge them for the actual costs of that representation.” The First Division concluded, based upon the Corzine case, that “[t]he BLET (as does the UTU) has the right to protect the interests of its members, and to impose those costs as it did through negotiations with the Carrier.”

“While each day brings more evidence that these two organizations should be merged in the interests of all train and engine service employes due to the inconsistency of seniority maintained by the BLET instead of advocating itself with a labor union that represents employees in an industry directly competitive with railroads,” Iannone said UTU International President Paul Thompson.

“This choice of affiliation does not do right by the members of these two organizations or the rail industry.”

Training
activities. Unfortunately, conductors and assistant conductors have not received adequate security training following 9/11, and that is a serious public-safety issue that the news report touched on,” Iannone said. “I just wish they had done it in a more constructive way.”

For NJT conductor Diana Lane (a member of Local 65 in Newark, N.J.), it is a day she will not soon forget. Indeed, she soon learned she was the subject of a television news investigative report looking at possible terrorist targets.

Conductor Lane was assigned to NJT Train 6635. A female passenger with a large suitcase boarded the train at Secaucus during the crowded evening rush hour. It is not uncommon for passengers to carry luggage, including large suitcases, onto commuter and passenger trains.

Additional facts also are clear. The woman was instructed by conductor Lane to seat herself near her suitcase, which, because of its size and the crowded car, was placed in the designated luggage area. As commuters departed the train at subsequent stations and more seats became available, the woman moved to a more comfortable seat further from the luggage area – but still not more than 10 feet from her suitcase.

Between stations, conductor Lane stationed herself in that luggage area, filling out train reports. When the train stopped at Convery Station and the woman passenger detrained, conductor Lane was clearly aware that the suitcase belonged to the woman passenger who had brought it on board.

The New York News reported that if the woman (who, it turned out, was an undercover reporter for Fox News) had been a terrorist, the suitcase was brought on board and placed in the luggage area could have contained explosives.

As Iannone points out, the problem was not where the woman sat or where the suitcase was placed. A suitcase containing explosives could cause substantial harm on a crowded commuter train and proper investigation would be required. In fact, conductor Lane “did her job in accordance with the rules provided by her employer,” Iannone said.

What the televisions news investigative report failed to explain is that conductors and assistant conductors do not have authority to interrogate passengers with regard to their private property – or to search luggage.

The News “to assign a reporter to do an in-depth investigation with those who are responsible for implementing and operating train security,” Iannone said. “It has been more than three years since 9/11, and aside from a lot of meetings and talking heads, little has been done for train security in America.” Iannone said. “Conductors and astistant conductors are the heroes when problems do arise.”

UTU International President Paul Thompson, after reviewing the matter, said, “The National Transportation Safety Board repeatedly has singled out the heroic actions of conductors and assistant conductors following passenger train accidents. Now that terrorist activity is a real possibility on every train, it is urgent that passenger and commuter railroads focus more on the essential role of conductors and assistant conductors and provide them with the training and resources necessary to protect the traveling public.”

“I don’t think anyone has really, really raised the profile of how essential conductors are to train security and operations.,” Thompson said. “But I think there is a realization that they are more than passenger service – that they are first responders.”

“Within a few days, a train conductor was shot in Miami, and yet the news media did not really make a big deal of it,” Thompson said. “Sure, there is a lot of negative attention on terrorism, but there’s a lot of positive attention on terrorism.”

“I think that the security role of conductors has been overlooked. They are police officers with firearms who are on trains with 9 to 18 passengers,” Thompson said. “They are the front line of how the situ-tation of railroad police abuse against union members was launched and demonstrates once again that the UTU’s bipartisan political stance is effective and beneficial to our members,” Thompson said. “The actual report also confirms once again that when the UTU does protest to Congress, its complaints are legitimate.”

In 2003 alone, the IG, major railroads used their police on 975 separate occasions to investigate employees. The IG called this “significant” and also observed that carriers have used railroad police “to engage in activities that are not consistent with their designated role, but rather with the role of conductors and assistant conductors. These activities include:•On Amtrak, a conductor was arrested by at least five railroad policemen and handcuffed for the “disorderly conduct of an employee.” •On Amtrak, a conductor was arrested by at least five railroad policemen and handcuffed for the “disorderly conduct of an employee.” •On Amtrak, a conductor was arrested by at least five railroad policemen and handcuffed for the “disorderly conduct of an employee.”

On Florida East Coast Railway, the chief of railroad police said, “I have seen officers engaged in illegal wiretapping or eavesdropping of employee telephone calls.”

UTUIA Scholarship: The Key to Success

A message from UTU International President Paul C. Thompson

Education is the key to success, and the key to an education can be a United Transportation Union Insurance Association scholarship. With college enrollment time upon us, we strongly urge all eligible persons to take a few minutes to fill out the UTUIA scholarship application form printed below and apply for a UTUIA scholarship. It will be one of the smartest things they ever do.

This is the 31st year UTUIA is making available 50 continuing $500 scholarships for its members, and the sons, daughters and grandchildren of its members. We are very proud of our scholarship program, a pride that comes from helping thousands of college students over the years. We realize the amount awarded, $500 a year, doesn’t meet the full cost of the recipient’s education, but in this way we can help a larger number of students with educational costs. They may use the scholarship money for tuition, learning materials or other related expenses.

UTUIA scholarship winners will receive the full amount of the award each year for up to four years of undergraduate study as long as they maintain a satisfactory academic record.

With a UTUIA scholarship, we hope to give the recipient the opportunity for a full-time education instead of a part-time education, day school instead of night school, higher education instead of basic training.

We are proud also in knowing that UTUIA scholarship recipients are enrolled in some of the finest and most prestigious colleges and universities in the world. We also can point proudly to the many achievements of past scholarship winners who have contributed so much to our great nation.

UTUIA is proud and happy to provide these scholarships for they are an opportunity for achievement. The success of deserving students is our success and the benefits are boundless. The key to success is education, and the key to education is a UTUIA scholarship. Take a minute to apply for the chance of a lifetime.

As the saying goes: “If you think education is expensive, try ignorance.”

DISTRIBUTION

Fifty continuing $500 scholarships are awarded each year upon verification of enrollment for the fall term. The scholarships are prorated according to the number of UTU and UTUIA insurance members in each of nine districts. Names of the 50 scholarship winners for the academic year 2005-2006 will be drawn at UTUIA headquarters in Cleveland after the March 31, 2005, deadline for submission of applications.

ELIGIBILITY

Requirements for a scholarship applicant are that he or she be at least a high school senior or equivalent; age 25 or under; be a UTU member or UTUIA-insured member, the child or grandchild of a UTU member or UTUIA-insured member, or the child of a deceased UTU member or UTUIA-insured member. (If member is deceased please include date of death). UTU members or UTUIA-insured members must be U.S. residents.

Applicants also must be accepted for admittance or already enrolled for at least 12 credit hours per quarter or semester at a recognized institution of higher learning (university, college or junior college, nursing or technical school offering college credit). Graduate schools are not included. Families of full-time International officers are not eligible.

AWARDS

Scholarships are awarded on the basis of chance, not grades. A UTUIA scholar, however, is expected to maintain a satisfactory academic record to keep the scholarship for the full four years.

ADMINISTRATION

The UTUIA Scholarship Committee decides whether individual scholarships should be continued or discontinued. Each successful applicant must provide annual proof of eligibility or be before a deadline set by the scholarship committee to qualify for a continuing award. The day-to-day management of the program is handled by the office of the UTUIA general secretary and treasurer.

INVEST IN THE CHANCE OF A LIFETIME

The UTUIA Scholarship Program is an open program. All eligible students, regardless of previous grades or future plans that don’t happen to include college, are strongly urged to apply, to take five minutes to invest in the chance of a lifetime, the chance for a better future.
UTU Local 1138 officer killed in head-on crash in Florida

RICHLAND, Fla. – A UTU local officer working as a conductor was killed in a head-on collision of two CSX cargo trains early Nov. 29 in eastern Pasco County, Fla. Killed was Cedric J. Jones, vice local chairperson of UTU Local 1138 in Miami, Fla. He was 28 years old and lived in Opa Locka, Fla.

Jones had been railroading about two years and had a seniority date of July 1, 2002. He had a wife and two children.

Jones was “a super, super nice guy,” Florida State Legislative Director Carl Cochran said.

“He was an exceptional human being and a true friend to all of us,” Local 1138 Chairperson Yvonne Hayes said. “Everybody has good memories of him. So many people were touched by him. He was not only an exceptional person to work with as a railroader and union representative but he was a great friend and father and brother and son. It is a terrible loss for all of us.”

Jones and engineer E.E. Anderson were northbound on their way to Wildwood from Miami when they met a southbound 136-car freight train.

Jones jumped from the locomotive before the crash and was killed after being struck by a boxcar, investigators told the Tampa Tribune. Anderson survived his jump, but was reported to have broken bones. He was treated at a local hospital and released.

Engineer G.M. Whitehead II of Lake Butler and conductor W. E. Taylor of Bartow (a member of UTU Local 1221 in Tampa, Fla.), crewmembers on the southbound train, were admitted to East Pasco Medical Center with injuries that were not thought to be life threatening, according to reports.

An investigation team from The National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB) traveled to the accident scene and was assisted by members of the UTU Transportation Safety Team.

Investigators have yet to confirm what caused the accident but CSX officials focused on several angles: The behavior of the train crews at the time of impact, the possibility of equipment failure, and the actions of a dispatcher in Jacksonville who operates signals and switches by computerized remote from a central console, according to news report.

The black boxes in each locomotive recorded the southbound train traveling at 28 mph, less than half its maximum speed of 60 mph. No data was available for the northbound train, according to news reports.

NTSB officials in Washington used the Zephyrhills crash as an opportunity to press the railroads to install automatic shutoffs in their locomotives.

Head-on crashes between trains are rare. Of 170 collisions through August of this year nationwide, only seven were classified as “head-on,” according to the Federal Railroad Administration website.
