Situation awareness protects your limbs, lives

During the first six months of 2011, 37 serious injuries occurred during switching operations, resulting in three fatalities and eight amputations; while over the past two years, five rail workers have died in accidents involving rolling rail equipment.

The Switching Operations Fatality Analysis (SOFA) Working Group and the UTU Rail Safety Task Force have been consulting with the FRA to study the causes and prevention of such horrific accidents, leading the FRA Oct. 11 to issue new recommendations aimed at preventing such fatalities and injuries.

The recommendations, published in the Federal Register, are intended, says the FRA, to convey to carrier management and rail workers “the critical importance of following key operating procedures when going between rolling equipment.”

These recommendations include:

SOFA’s five lifesaving tips:

• Secure all equipment before any action is taken.

• Protect all employees against moving equipment.

• Communicate safety at the beginning of a job or when work changes.

• Develop, implement, and monitor sound communication protocols that require employees on multi-person crews to notify their fellow crew members when the need arises to enter between two pieces of rolling equipment

• Review SOFA Safety Recommendation No. 1 relating to adjusting knuckles, adjusting drawbars and installing end-of-train devices, and communicate procedures implementing that recommendation to employees working in yards or other locations where the possibility of entering between rolling equipment exists.

SOFA Safety Recommendation No. 1 provides: “Any crew member intending to foul track or equipment must notify the locomotive engineer before such action can take place. The locomotive engineer must then apply locomotive or train brakes, have the reverser centered, and then confirm this action with the individual on the ground.

“Additionally, any crew member that intends to adjust knuckles/drawbars, or apply or remove EOT device, must ensure that the cut of cars to be coupled into is separated by no fewer than 50 feet. Also, the person on the ground must physically inspect the cut of cars not attached to the locomotive to ensure they are completely stopped;”

Arbitrator rules for SMART merger

An arbitrator has ruled that a merger between the UTU and the Sheet Metal Workers International Association (SMWIA) be implemented and that the presidents of the two unions – or their designees – meet to decide how the implementation is to proceed.

Arbitrator Michael H. Gottesman said the merger agreement to create the Sheet Metal, Air, Rail and Transportation (SMART) Workers Union is an enforceable agreement.

A complaint by UTU members still must be resolved

Gottesman was named by AFL-CIO President Rich Trumka to decide the question of enforceability after binding arbitration was ordered by Federal District Court Judge John Bates.

Gottesman acknowledged that there is pending before Judge Bates another merger-related case – a complaint by several UTU members that Titles I and V of the Labor Management Reporting and Disclosure Act (LMRDA) were violated.

When Judge Bates ordered binding arbitration to determine if the UTU/SMWIA merger agreement is enforceable, he said the LMRDA claims were beyond the purview of the arbitrator, and that he would decide those claims following the outcome of the arbitration.

Although the SMWIA asked Gottesman to allow the SMWIA to, in Gottesman’s words, “effectively micromanage the implementation of the merger, complete with timelines and very detailed instructions for the behavior of UTU officials,” Gottesman denied the request. Ruled Gottesman: “It is far better that the parties decide how to implement the merger than to have an arbitrator do so.”

Accordingly, the award simply directs the presidents of UTU and SMWIA (or their designees) to meet “to discuss any and all issues pertinent to implementation of the merger...and to continue meeting on a regular basis until all such matters have been resolved.”

Brian Hunstad extends his gratitude to co-workers Cody Strohschein, Chad Dafoe and Lynn Rahn (BLET), who administered CPR and promptly contacted 911 after Hunstad suffered a medical condition while disembarking from a charter bus July 2. Hunstad has since recovered. “Without the know-how and quick response of my co-workers, things could have been much worse. Local 931 Chairperson Kirk S. Porter contacted UTU News to recognize the efforts of Local Chairperson J.C. Roy, who for the past five years has been meeting with conductor and engineer trainees at the Norfolk Southern training facility in McDonough, Ga. “When they register at the motel, J.C. meets them and extends a dinner invitation, where he presents an introduction to the railroad,” Porter said. In other news, General Chairperson GO 680. Luther “Pete” King Jr. and others are working to ensure that a railroad caboose donated to the city of Mullens, W. Va., remains a reminder of the city’s rail history.

The caboose was once part of the rolling stock of the Virginian Railway, which established terminal and yard facilities near Mullens in the first half of the 20th century. The Virginian merged with Norfolk & Western Railway in 1959, which later became part of the Southern Railway. NS donated the caboose to the city about 20 years ago and it holds sentimental value for King, who lives in Mullens.

“I actually worked on this very caboose when it was still in service,” King said.

After it was donated to the city, numerous volunteers, including King, helped to restore the caboose.

“I can’t remember everyone who was involved, but some of the railroaders who helped out were engineer Bobby Graham, Pete Kirt, Carl “Trigger” Green and maintenance-of-way employee Jessie Toliver,” King said. “Quite a few other retirees were, and are still, involved.”

In fact, King said, the caboose was just given a fresh coat of paint this summer by some of the volunteers.

The inside of the caboose was restored as well and contains numerous pieces of railroadiana.

“We’ve got locks, keys, oil cans, crank telephones, pinch bars, kerosene lights and some old telegraph equipment inside,” King said.

The caboose still sits on a railroad lease and King and the others want to ensure it stays there. They are hoping to purchase the land the caboose rests on and would like to have a fence placed around it.

“Just like everything else, it’s hard to get financial assistance. I am talking to the railroad about it. Last time he was here, NS Executive Vice President-Plant Manager took a tour,” King said.

Anyone interested in seeing the inside of the caboose can contact King at (304) 673-0805.

UTU develops Amtrak training manual

The UTU, as a subcontractor to Amtrak, is in the final stages of developing a training manual—Emerging Incidents Procedures—for some 8,000 frontline Amtrak employees.

The manual will be used as part of Amtrak’s 2012 Block Training cycle to assist frontline employees aboard trains, in stations and on platforms in developing skills related to situational awareness, observation, communication and response,” said UTU Training and Education Coordinator Bruce Feltmeyer.

These Amtrak employees include conductors, assistant conductors, engineers, lead service attendants and on-board service employees.

UTU reaches deal with Texas shortline

DITTLINGER, Texas – The UTU has reached a tentative collective bargaining agreement with shortline Western Rail Road on behalf of train engine and mechanical workers, who will soon vote on ratification.

The negotiations were led by General Chairperson Doyle Turner (GO 147), who heads the UTU’s shortline organizing program.

Western Rail employees selected the UTU as their collective bargaining agent in February after meeting with UTU organizers Rich Ross and Mike Lewis.

This tentative agreement, as with others negotiated with shortlines, is intended “to bring parity in wages, benefits and work rules to the thousands of employees in the shortline railroad industry, along with the many other protections offered by union membership,” Turner said.

“The seniority, scope and discipline rules these members now enjoy are what makes union membership valuable.”

Western Rail Road connects a quarry and cement plant at Dittlinger with Union Pacific’s Austin, Texas, subdivision. Dittlinger is four miles south of New Braunfels and about 50 miles south of Austin.

New rail rate tables now posted online

The standard basic daily and mileage rates of pay negotiated under the new national rail contract are now available at www.utu.org.

The rate tables pertain to employees in the crafts of conductor, yardman, brakeman, engineer and fireman/hostler who are covered by the national contract and are retroactive to July 1, 2010.

The ratified contract covers some 38,000 UTU members employed by BNSE, CSX, Kansas City Southern, Norfolk Southern, Soo Line, Union Pacific and numerous smaller carriers—all represented in national handling by the railroad industry’s National Carriers’ Conference Committee.

To view the rates, select “Documents” in the blue-line menu bar near the top of the UTU homepage, www.utu.org.

Lawmakers target high-speed rail funding

WASHINGTON – Just when federal funding for high-speed rail appeared dead as a rusted rail spike, Senate Democratic Leader Dick Durbin of Illinois exercised his cloture and reopened the door, if only slightly.

On Sept. 20, the Senate Transportation Appropriations Committee voted to zero out all federal funds for high-speed rail. Coming on the heels of a similar House Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee vote, Sen. Frank Lautenberg (D-N.J.), one of the most ardent congressional supporters of high-speed rail, declared that elimination of high-speed rail funding is “a casualty of the cuts mandated in the debt-limit deal.”

But when the entire Senate Appropriations Committee met Sept. 21, Durbin was successful in having the entire committee override the transportation subcommittee’s, instead, approve $100 million for high-speed funding for fiscal year 2012.

True, the $100 million, while seeming a large sum, is relatively small given the hundreds of billions of dollars required to build a series of high-speed rail lines in America. Consider that President Obama, earlier in the year, had urged $8 billion for high-speed rail in FY 2012, on top of $10.1 billion previously approved by Congress, with $7 billion of that $10.1 billion already allocated to numerous high-speed rail proposals nationwide.

With the door for high-speed rail funding reopened, the battle now turns to the House and Senate, where more money might be appropriated when the final votes are cast for FY 2012 high-speed rail funding. Amtrak funding also faces a tough battle in the House and Senate.

In the Senate, appropriators are recommending $544 million in Amtrak operating subsidies for FY 2012 ($18 million less than FY 2011 funding) plus $937 million toward capital spending and debt service (an increase of $15 million from the FY 2011 appropriation).

But in the House, appropriators are recommending considerably less for Amtrak in FY 2012: $227 million for operating subsidies and $899 million for capital and debt service.

Also awaiting further House action is a House Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee recommendation to eliminate all federal funding for state-supported Amtrak service in FY 2012. No action on that anti-Amtrak initiative has surfaced in the Senate.

UTU hosts safety meeting with regulators

The Minnesota Legislative Board recently hosted a safety meeting for members of all rail unions in the area so they could meet with federal and state authorities to learn about safety and the latest regulations.

Hosted by the Minnesota Intercaft Association, meeting participants were able to question FRA Administrator Joe Szabo, Associate Administrator for Safety Jo Strang, National Legislative Director James Stem, as well as regional deputies and inspectors, on a wide range of safety-related topics. The reaction to the meeting was positive, State Legislative Director Phil Quayle reported, and the FRA received very valuable reports and fielded a tough array of questions from railroad workers in Minnesota.

“Speaking on behalf of UTU members in Minnesota, I want to thank FRA Administrator Szabo and Associate Administrator Strang for making this listening session happen,” Quayle said. “This was another positive and productive step by FRA to reach out to railroad workers and hear from us directly.”
Collective bargaining delivers fairness, justice

(For more than six decades, Bill Lucy has been a labor-union foot soldier. In 1968, as an officer of AFSCME Local 1733 in Memphis, Tenn., he collaborated with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. during the sanitation workers’ strike, during which Dr. King was assassinated. In August, Bill Lucy spoke to delegates at the UTU’s quadrennial convention in Hollywood, Fla. Following is a summary of his remarks.)

The UTU, through its Collective Bargaining Department, has demonstrated a solid commitment to trade union principles and solidarity.

President Lucy recognizes there is a daily crisis in the lives of working families as they struggle to put bread on their tables, clothes on their backs and roofs over their heads.

The crazy governors of Ohio and Wisconsin have seen the solidarity of the UTU as it works to preserve collective bargaining rights and quality health care.

The UTU may be small compared to some other unions, but it is right in the middle of the fight – and that’s where you should always be.

The crazy lawmakers who would strip workers of their democratic right to have a union now know you will fight until hell freezes over, and then skate across the ice, to fight to protect those rights.

You have that reputation and you can be proud.

A question was raised on CNN whether poor people are responsible for our nation’s economic condition.

That’s an incredible question to ask after we bailed out Wall Street, bailed out the banks and bailed out corporations.

The poor can’t pay and the rich won’t pay, and who does that leave?

Look across the room at each other and you spot those who are going to bring this nation out of the difficulty it is in.

The business of protecting and improving benefits for you, your family and all those following in your footsteps never sleeps.

Given the threats surrounding us, we need you to stay involved more than ever.

The UTU Alumni Association gives you that opportunity to continue belonging – to stay in touch, to learn about the hot-button issues of the day affecting us, and to participate in helping stem the political tide washing over our livelihoods and threatening our retirement security.

UTU Alumni Association meetings and news keeps you informed of working families as they struggle to put bread on their tables, clothes on their backs and roofs over their heads.

The UTU Alumni Association gives you the opportunity to continue belonging, to stay in touch.

Do you know there are about twice as many retired railroaders as there are active ones?

I’m with you. I’ve been retired from the railroad since 2005. And what we have in common is we are all drawing Railroad Retirement or Social Security benefits and we’re covered by Medicare.

Do you know there are about twice as many retired railroaders as there are active ones? This is important, because you may also remember how, every so many years, while we were working, politicians wanted to get their hands on your Railroad Retirement? Well, they are at it again.

Do you also know that attacks on Social Security and Medicare are on Washington’s menu again? Those who want to balance the budget and control the deficits on the backs of poor people are resounding.

The fact is that it is always the working men and women on whom the weight falls to clean up the mess politicians create.

Working families are victims of the lunacy that has overtaken the political extremists who want to take away our democratic rights to determine our bargaining representatives.

There is currently an unstrained effort to end workers’ rights to have a voice in the workplace.

It is the collective bargaining process that gives us fairness and justice in the workplace, and we will fight for it every step of the way.

I reject the notion that if God meant for you to be well off you would have made you that way.

We as workers must come together to fight back against the forces that seek to turn back the clock to weaken unions and cheapen the cost of labor.

October 2011 UTU News

State Legislative Director Glenn Newsom recently met with State Rep. Michael Stinziano (D-25th, Columbus) in the Ohio State Board of Elections to discuss issues of importance to UTU members and their families.

“Representative Stinziano is an up-and-coming Democrat in the Ohio House with a background in the legislative field inherited from his father, Mike, who was also a state representative. I feel he stands strong with labor. He knows how important unions are for Ohio. He was present at the Ohio Ballot Board meeting when the board certified Issue 25’s ballot language to make a ‘no’ vote signify rejection of Senate Bill No. 5.

“Don’t let Michael’s youthful appearance fool you. He already possesses the knowledge and political savvy to be a leader for the Ohio Democratic Party in the near future. We are fortunate to call Michael a ‘friend of labor,’” Newsom said.

State Legislative Director Greg Hynes recently met with Labor Secretary Hilda Solis in Phoenix to discuss the importance of UTU members registering to vote and voting in all elections. The two also discussed solutions to high unemployment rates and how the Obama administration’s jobs bill could put more Americans to work.

New Jersey

The State Legislative Board recently met to make recommendations for the Nov. 8 general election, State Legislative Director Dan O’Connell reports. The candidate recommendations are being sent to each local, he said.

Members should be aware of the following voter-registration deadlines:

Nov. 1 deadline for mail-in ballot applications by mail for the general election;

Nov. 7 deadline for in-person mail-in ballot applications for the general election.

Bus, transit and essential-air service funding extended

WASHINGTON – Federal Transit Administration bus-project and other transit funding, in danger owing to political squabbling, will remain in place at least through March 31, 2012, following House and Senate action to extend temporarily, for the eighth time since 2009, highway taxes that fund transit programs. House leaders are seeking a 35 percent cut in transit funding.

The House and Senate also agreed Sept. 15 to a new four-month extension of Federal Aviation Administration taxes that fund the Essential Air Services (EAS) program vital to regional airlines that employ UTU-represented pilots and flight attendants. It was the 22nd temporary extension for this program since 2007.

House, Senate seek to reach compromise on stalled funding

The president signed the temporary extensions into law, allowing more time for the House and Senate to continue attempts at reaching compromise on a permanent extension of transit and EAS programs that have been stalled for years.

The highway bill extension ensures that more than $4 billion from the Highway Trust Fund for Federal Transit Administration formulas and bus programs will remain available for spending through March 31. Disagreement between the House and Senate on the number of years to authorize a new highway/transit spending bill is the reason for that stall.

A permanent FAA reauthorization, which includes the EAS program, is stalled over an inability to agree on future EAS subsidies, and an attempt by House Republicans to include in the bill a provision overturning a 2010 National Mediation Board rulemaking.

That rulemaking changed the rules for representation elections from counting those not voting as “no” votes, to determining outcomes based only on those voting.

Van service fined in wake of deadly BNSF crash

KELSEO, Wash. – Shuttle van operator Coach America Crew Transport has been fined more than $13,000 by the State of Washington for alleged safety lapses in the wake of a train-van accident in March that killed a BNSF engineer, a conductor trainee and the van driver, and seriously injured a UTU-represented conductor.

The shuttle van, transporting BNSF crew members to an away-from-home terminal, was struck by a BNSF train at a private crossing in Kelso.

According to the Vancouver Columbian, Coach America Crew Transport was fined by the state for “failing to tailor its accident prevention program to the types of hazards drivers may encounter” and for “not implementing and enforcing safety training programs for employees and not providing on-the-job instruction to employees about hazards.” Coach America said it would appeal the violations.

Arizona

Arizona State Legislative Director Bob Guy recently joined state and local transit leaders to urge that Congress exempt mass transit from its next round of budget cuts.

Guy is also asking UTU members to make sure the media get the message by writing letters to editors of local publications.

“Our jobs are at stake, and so are the jobs of others who depend on transit to get them to their urban workplaces” Guy said. “Cutting transit will be extremely disruptive to the local and national economy.”

The “Don’t X Out Public Transit” rally was called to protest the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee’s recent proposal to cut 35 percent from federal highway and transit funding.

“We have to send Congress a very blunt, immediate message: ‘Hands off our transportation systems,’” Guy said.

We fight for transit funding

As some in Congress seek to slash spending on public transit – the only affordable means for millions of Americans going to and from work – ridership is soaring.

The American Public Transit Association says more than five billion trips were taken via public transit during the first six months of 2011 – up sharply from the same period a year earlier. In fact, transit ridership is at its highest level in more than half a century as Americans continue to abandon the expensive automobile commute in favor of convenient and more affordable public transit.

Public transit has been shown by researchers to benefit local economies. In many communities without effective public transit options, small businesses have difficulty recruiting workers for service jobs as many cannot afford automobiles to take them to and from work.

The American Public Transit Association says that for each $1 billion invested in public transportation, 36,000 jobs are supported and created.

A study released by the University of Wisconsin found that cuts to bus service in Milwaukee made 40,000 jobs at 1,700 employers inaccessible by public transit. And, concluded the study, proposed new cuts in public transit budgets would put 13,000 jobs out of the reach of workers not owning automobiles.

“The very people perhaps most in need of jobs would face another barrier to getting a job,” concluded the study. “That’s no way to rebuild an economy.”

The UTU continues to deliver to Congress the message that public transit is an essential service deserving of full funding support. I encourage members to email and phone their congressional representatives with the same positive message.

Budget cuts also are adversely affecting public transit workers, and our UTU organizers are seeing a surge of interest among the unorganized to be represented by a strong labor union such as the UTU.

We will continue to reach out to the unorganized. Over the past 43 months, the UTU has organized 24 separate properties.

The American Public Transit Association says more than five billion trips were taken via public transit during the first six months of 2011 – up sharply from the same period a year earlier. In fact, transit ridership is at its highest level in more than half a century as Americans continue to abandon the expensive automobile commute in favor of convenient and more affordable public transit.

Public transit has been shown by researchers to benefit local economies. In many communities without effective public transit options, small businesses have difficulty recruiting workers for service jobs as many cannot afford automobiles to take them to and from work.

The American Public Transit Association says that for each $1 billion invested in public transportation, 36,000 jobs are supported and created.

A study released by the University of Wisconsin found that cuts to bus service in Milwaukee made 40,000 jobs at 1,700 employers inaccessible by public transit. And, concluded the study, proposed new cuts in public transit budgets would put 13,000 jobs out of the reach of workers not owning automobiles.

“The very people perhaps most in need of jobs would face another barrier to getting a job,” concluded the study. “That’s no way to rebuild an economy.”

The UTU continues to deliver to Congress the message that public transit is an essential service deserving of full funding support. I encourage members to email and phone their congressional representatives with the same positive message.

Budget cuts also are adversely affecting public transit workers, and our UTU organizers are seeing a surge of interest among the unorganized to be represented by a strong labor union such as the UTU.

We will continue to reach out to the unorganized. Over the past 43 months, the UTU has organized 24 separate properties.

“STRONGER THAN EVER”
Imagine you are in the batter’s box, but at the ready. Now imagine a softball coming at you at 90 mph, launched by a pitcher standing only 46 feet away.

That’s what many of UTU member Doran Geissler’s opponents saw, swung at and missed.

Geissler, 81, a retired member of Local 582 at Steven’s Point, Wis., and now living in Eau Claire, Wis., is one of Wisconsin’s top fast-pitch softball pitchers in history.

In a 44-year career on the mound, his record shows 1,702 wins against 296 losses. That includes five perfect games and 58 no-hitters.

In 1969, he went 13-0 with six shutouts and an ERA of 1.04.

He also once went seven and a half years without losing an league play.

Geissler is credited with playing with 31 different teams in Wisconsin and a couple more in Minnesota.

Geissler was recently inducted into the Wisconsin Amateur Softball Association Hall of Fame. He was the only male fast pitch player honored.

He played on three Major League champions and five times was named to the all-state tournament team. One year in the middle 1960s, he compiled a remarkable 74-2 record while traveling between Chippewa Falls and the Twin Cities as a Soo Line railroad conductor, a job he held for 32 years.

“I could work a lot in the winter months,” he said. “Then I could take off some time in the summer when I played. I probably couldn’t do that now.”

“In fast pitch softball, you can make the ball move a lot more because the ball is bigger — a 12-inch diameter versus nine inch for the baseball. I could make it rise, dip, curve and break a lot more than a baseball pitcher could.”

Geissler also sported a .300 batting average during his career.

“I pitched until I was about 60, then took up golf. It’s a lot easier on the body,” he said.

RRB has new labor member

WASHINGTON — A former secretary & treasurer of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen — Walt Barrows — is the new labor member of the Railroad Retirement Board following his Senate confirmation Sept. 27. He succeeds Butch Speakman, who chose to retire.

Barrows began his railroad career as a signalman with Norfolk & Western Railway (now part of Norfolk Southern) in 1974. Since 2004 — while holding his signalmen post — he has been the labor trustee of the National Railroad Retirement Investment Trust, a position earlier held by former UTU General Secretary & Treasurer Dan Johnson.

Open enrollment starts for Railroad Medicare

Many people investigate choosing a Part D plan to assist in prescription drug coverage. If you select Part D, you do not have to give up your Railroad Medicare Part B benefits.

If you are enrolled in Part C — a Medicare advantage plan that is a substitute for Railroad Medicare’s Part B coverage — now is the time to determine if you want to stay with your Part C plan or return to Railroad Medicare.

For more information, visit www.medicare.gov/find-a-plan to use the “Medicare Plan Finder,” or look at the 2011 “Medicare & You” handbook, which you can download at www.medicare.gov.

For additional information, contact the Railroad Medicare Beneficiary Contact Center at (800) 833-4455.

Bay area railroaders to host fourth annual reunion lunch

Retired conductor John Herrmann of Local 694, Dumont, Calif., reminds all active and retired railroaders in the San Francisco Bay area of the fourth annual lunch and reunion from 1-5 p.m. Oct. 29 at Spencer’s Fresh Fish Grotto, 1919 Fourth St. in Berkeley, Calif. The cost of lunch is $31 in advance, or $36 at the door. Entrée choices are chicken, pork, salmon or pasta and include a salad, rolls and beverage. To make a reservation, call Herrmann at (530) 926-5180.

“I believe we had a record attendance of 85 last year and surely want to have more than 100 this year,” Herrmann said.

Railroaders, family and friends from SP, UP, WP, AT&SF and Amtrak, as well as other lines, from all crafts, are invited to attend. Those paying in advance should send their check or money order to Herrmann at 20 Rahn Cr., Walnut Creek, CA 94597, and indicate the entrée choice.

The Final Call

Following are the names of recently deceased members who maintained annual membership in the UTU Alumni Association, according to reports received at UTU International Headquarters. These brothers and sisters will be missed by their many friends and by fellow UTU Alumni Association members.

CP caboose builder wins UTU Brass Lantern Award

Kyle Gardiner, 67, of Vancouver, B.C., has been honored with the 2011 UTU Brass Lantern Award as the builder of the most authentic model caboose at this year’s National Model Railroad Association convention.

Gardiner, a retired mechanical engineer, spent more than 400 hours building the O-scale (quarter inch to the foot) model of a Canadian Pacific caboose that once ran on the Kettle Valley Railway in British Columbia. It is constructed mostly of brass, with very few pre-made parts.

“I am very pleased to receive the UTU Brass Lantern Award,” Gardiner said. “It is a great honor. It is one of the two or three most prestigious awards given to model railroaders.”

Peace of mind for you

Young families have very little discretionary cash. In fact, most young families rely on the income of both spouses to make ends meet.

You’ve thought about how your family would carry on if something happened to you. But you put the thought out of your mind because, after all, you’re young. Nothing’s going to happen to you. Right?

What if something were to happen to you? Would there be enough money to provide for even the barest of necessities, especially since it takes both incomes to make ends meet?

If you could protect the financial well-being of your loved ones for just a few dollars a month, wouldn’t you do whatever it takes to set aside those few dollars to ensure the financial well-being of your family? Of course you would!

The answer is life insurance. Life insurance – especially term insurance – is very inexpensive at young ages and, while you’re young and insurable, you stand the best chance of getting the best rate possible.

We can provide the peace of mind you’re looking for. Contact us via email at “utuiasales@utu.org” or by telephone toll-free at (800) 558-8842.

Arizona SLD helps blunt anti-union extremists

PHOENIX – Arizona State Legislative Director Greg Hynes has seen the political attack on organized labor unfold in Southeast, the Midwest and north in Idaho, knowing it was but a matter of time before the extremists came knocking on the door in the his state. When they did, Hynes and a labor union officers were prepared to fight back.

A federal district court in Phoenix listened carefully – and agreed – as organized labor challenged a new state law aimed squarely at diluting the political power of labor unions in Arizona.

An anti-union Arizona legislative majority decreed that some labor unions – but not the ones with which they curry favor, and certainly not employers – should be restricted in making contributions to political candidates or causes.

A First Amendment violation was made clear to the federal court – that the law’s intent was arbitrarily to restrict the free speech of targeted labor unions – and the state was ordered by the court not to enforce the law on its effective date of Oct. 1. The court now will consider imposing a permanent injunction.

In the fashion of the novel “1984” by George Orwell, which probed mass mind control, the law’s authors spitefully named it, “Protect Arizona Employees’ Paychecks from Politics Act.”

The law is intended to restrict targeted labor union contributions to political candidates or causes.

Michigan buys NS line, saving rail jobs

The State of Michigan has reached agreement with Norfolk Southern to purchase a 135-mile segment of track between Kalamazoo and Dearborn, which is good news for the UTU members who work the route.

For years, NS had threatened to break up the line and sell or lease it to a Class III non-union railroad, which would put the jobs of many rail workers, including UTU members, in limbo.

And, for years, the UTU has been fighting those efforts, in the courts and before the Surface Transportation Board.

This purchase announcement was just the news the UTU was hoping to hear.

“After years of meetings, lobbying, committee and court hearings, we finally got the very same deal the Michigan Legislative Board offered back in 2006,” State Legislative Director Jerry Gibson said.

“Michigan will purchase the NS line with grant funds and lease the tracks to Amtrak, which will also maintain and dispatch the lines while increasing the speed and reducing travel times for passenger service (110 mph). Most importantly, NS will maintain the freight service and thus our UTU members’ jobs and contracts, as well as provide Class I-level safety and service to the many customers on the line.”

Gibson said UTU member involvement, including their UTU PAC donations, were crucial to saving the line.

“The members of Local 278 in Jackson and Local 1477 in Dearborn stepped up and worked hard to prevent this line sale,” Gibson said. “As these members learned: It may not be now, but one day your investment in UTU PAC may very well save your job (besides the benefits we are all already enjoying from past UTU PAC success stories). I simply cannot find a better investment than a simple $10 a month donation, the cost of a fast food lunch, for benefits that last years and years.”

Amtrak general committee elects Sampson chairperson

 Dirk Sampson has been elected general chairperson of Amtrak general committee 769, which represents a large number of passenger-train workers.

Sampson had been serving as acting general chairperson in the wake of the death of former general chairperson Roger Lentest, who died in July.

GO 769 represents UTU conductors and assistant conductors on Amtrak (New York City south to Washington, and on non-Northeast Corridor Amtrak passenger trains nationwide), as well as on Massachusetts Bay Commuter Railroad, Virginia Railway Express, South Florida Tri-Rail and Los Angeles MetroLink.

Ohio voters: Vote ‘NO’ on Issue 2

UTU members were active participants in the recent Labor Day rally in Toledo, Ohio. “The Labor Day celebration included a downtown parade and social gathering at the Toledo Zoo of friends and family of labor throughout the greater metropolitan area,” Local 2 Tom Gavin said. “A highlight was the overall support for the defeat of Ohio Senate Bill 5 (which restricts collective bargaining). The members of Locals 2 and 1928 (Toledo) and the brothers and sisters from CSX urge all union members in Ohio to vote ‘NO’ on Issue 2, which would repeal Senate Bill 5.”

Gerrymandering encourages the politics of division, extremism

Trujillo, with assistance from his state legislative board, arranged for the ballot initiative’s spokespersons to appear before public forums and newspaper editorial boards, solicited contributions to help fund state-wide advertising explaining the ballot initiative to voters, and helped organize petition drives to place the initiative before voters last year.

On Election Day, the Florida State Legislative Board helped to get out the vote. Trujillo noted that the ballot initiative began in response to 430 separate elections for the legislature where only three incumbents were defeated. This was seen as evidence of the effect of past Florida gerrymandering to protect re-election of incumbents.

Florida SLD fights to end gerrymandering

In Florida last month, the people prevailed as a federal district court ruled voters have the right to restrict the state legislature’s ability to redraw the election map wilfully to favor incumbent members of Congress and the state legislature.

Florida State Legislative Director Andres Trujillo and his state legislative board were in the thick of the battle, fighting for fair election districts that ensure voters decide their politicians rather than politicians deciding their voters.

Two incumbent Florida politicians unsuccessfully argued before the federal court that the U.S. Constitution gives state legislatures complete discretion in drawing the boundaries of election districts. The federal court ruled otherwise, saying Florida voters can bind their own state legislature through amendments to the state constitution.

Redrawing election districts to accommodate changes in population occurs in every state every 10 years following completion of the U.S. Census.

Frequently, the majority party in the legislature attempts to establish a political advantage for their party by manipulating the geographic boundaries of congressional and state legislature voting districts. The term is known as “gerrymandering” after 19th century Massachussets Gov. Elbridge Gerry, who led an effort that so contorted congressional election districts in that state that one was said to resemble the shape of a salamander.

Gerrymandering “encourages the politics of division and extremism, and allows for the underrepresentation of Florida citizens’ interests, in legal, civil, legislative and government matters,” Trujillo said.
